We feel deep gratitude towards the Cooper Union Museum, and also – on behalf of our Institution, the Danish Handcraft Guild – great joy, now that our dream of many years, actually dating back nearly 15 years, the dream of being allowed a showing at the Museum, has come true.

We extend our heartfelt thanks to the management of the Museum for this opportunity. We also hope that the various items on show will find friends among the American public – then will the purpose of our exhibition have been achieved.

Adane Lerche
Past President
Danish Handcraft Guild

In offering the first American showing of the work of members of the Danish Handcraft Guild, the Cooper Union Museum happily sees the fulfilment of a hope nourished for fifteen years. The achievement promises to outrun the hope: a larger and more varied collection of objects has been assembled for the occasion than had earlier been thought possible; and as a last-minute surprise the display has been favored in the provision, by the Guild, of a purely Danish setting, designed by an architect greatly admired in his country for the work that he has recently created there. For the distinguished patronage under which the exhibition comes to the United States, and for the generous and devoted support given so freely in Denmark and in this country, the Cooper Union Museum is deeply grateful.

Calvin S. Hathaway
Director of the Cooper Union Museum

Introduction

Selskabet til Haandarbejdets Fremme (The Danish Handcraft Guild), under the patronage of Her Majesty Queen Ingrid, was established in 1928 with the following purpose:

"The objects of the Guild are to protect and renew embroidery, handweaving and other home crafts of artistic design and to develop sales outlets for such items on the home market as well as abroad".

The Society has to-day more than 3000 members of which about 2500 are supporting members and 500 active craftspeople. In 1928 there was a growing consciousness in Denmark of the need for measures whereby to preserve continuity in the old traditions of craftsmanship within the art of textile-making and other handicrafts. The importance of a country-wide organization was clearly demonstrated by the fine results achieved by similar movements in Sweden and Norway.

With a view to making the best possible patterns and designs available for home-workers, studios and workshops were established. Shortly thereafter the first retail shop was opened in Copenhagen.

From the very start it was decided that a committee of artists and technical experts should approve of every article sold through the Guild. The guidance given by this committee during the past years has proved of immense value. The committee has ensured contact between artist and craftsman, a fact which has been the keynote throughout the Guild's history. It has established and maintained this connection and has been instrumental in creating the sense of quality which is so vital to the continued existence of handcraft.

Only two years after its establishment, the Guild joined hands with a society of craftspeople who until then had been selling through a shop of their own. The merging of these two societies created a double task for the Guild: to support the production of good textiles in home industry and to act as a selling outlet for committee-approved craftspeople with their own workshops. In its shop, the Guild now carries examples of printed textiles, silverware, ceramics and furniture in addition to its own textiles and weaves.

In collaboration with the Guild, our Faeroese society, "Føroyiska Heimevirki", was established in 1935, linking up the efforts that are made in connection with the hand-knitting industry and its fine traditions in our far-away islands in the Atlantic Ocean. In 1937, the Greenland society, "Gronlandsk Kunst og Husflid", was formed to maintain and develop the ancient traditions of Eskimo art.

In 1938, a school for the training of embroidery designers and teachers of needlework was started. Through these teachers and the publishing of a series of pattern-books, the Guild has been able to offer guidance to the very large number of Danish women who still embroider in their leisure hours.

Gradually, shops were opened in four large towns outside Copenhagen in order to secure the attainment of the Guild's second object: the development of selling outlets.

Since 1929, the Guild has exhibited the works of its members as well as textiles and embroidery from its own workshops every third year at the Copenhagen Museum of Decorative Art.

The fact that an ever increasing number of people are becoming interested in the various forms of craft created by the more than 300 active members of the Guild, is to a large extent attributable to these exhibitions.

The Danish Handcraft Guild is most grateful for the Cooper Union Museum's invitation. It has provided a long hoped for opportunity of presenting to the United States, our most treasured customer, a cross-section of the products made under the sponsorship of the Guild.

The Greenland Arts and Crafts Society

functions under the patronage of Her Majesty, the Queen of Denmark. Its purpose is to support and further the production of Greenland arts and crafts. The Greenland articles shown are grouped into the following categories:

I. Clothing. II. Implements – Lamps, Bowls etc. III. Model Tools IV. Carvings.

The Eskimo craft of carving has its roots far back in time. Greenlanders, particularly East Greenlanders have utilized the long periods of darkness for making their implements and equipment which are often beautifully decorated. Masks were made for ritualistic purposes, articles of clothing were often decorated with artistic patterns made from tiny bits of gaily colored seal skin. Human and animal motifs are often found.

The characteristic beaded collars and the embroidery on the national costumes worn by women on festive occasions, have developed after the introduction by Europeans of new materials, which the Greenlanders have utilized with ingenuity in the furtherance of their traditional decorative art.

In recent years, Greenlanders have begun to produce small mythological figures called "tupilak", used to illustrate their legendary concepts for the benefit of Europeans. Owing to their distinctive form and their very high artistic merit, these figures have aroused considerable interest. Many Greenlanders are now supplementing a meagre income by making these figures, as well as models of boats and implements. The society "Greenland Arts and Crafts" has contributed much in promoting these articles and has kindly made available the specimens on display at this Exhibition.
